Kolobok is based on a Russian traditional folk tale, but a team of dedicated translators and focus groups collaborated in retelling the original story into modern Russian, English, Spanish, and Chinese. The book is printed in all four of these languages at once!

Educational Resources: Lesson plans adaptable for grades K-2, based on national and Massachusetts educational standards, are available.

Natasha Bochkov is a young American author and award winning graphic designer; Kolobok is only the first in Ms. Bochkov's anticipated series of children's books written especially for multilingual families. Natasha Bochkov lives in southern New Hampshire and has two bilingual children of her own.
